November 2010

Robert McGhee and I, along with several key staff, attended the fall USET meeting in Verona, NY October 11-15, 2010. During the meeting, members of the CMCMA staff gave live demonstrations of Creek basket weaving; they made six altogether, one each day. It was very interesting to see them working on these baskets. It is a joy to know that we are bringing back our native crafts and traditions.

Veteran's Day is Thursday, November 11, 2010; Tribal Offices will be closed. Keep this in mind when making plans to visit the Clinic or other departments that offer services to Tribal Members. Let each of us remember our veterans on this day; those who serve, those who have served, and those who have paid the ultimate sacrifice.

With November comes Pow Wow. This is our 40th annual Pow Wow; it has grown immensely since our first homecoming 40 years ago. Tribal Members will be admitted free; gates will open at 10:00 a.m. both Thursday and Friday. Our annual Princess contest will be at 12:00 noon on Thursday so make sure you come out to see these beautiful young girls who have worked so hard to have a chance at representing our Tribe locally as well as throughout Indian Country.

This year's State of the Tribe has been scheduled for Saturday, November 27th at 5:00 p.m. Please mark your calendars and make plans to attend.

Tuesday, November 2nd is Election Day. I encourage all Tribal Members to vote for the candidates of their choice in the national, state, county, and city elections. The right to vote is a freedom that many American men and women have fought and died for: do not let their sacrifice be in vain. Vote on

Walk Of Life - A Walk To Remember

Submitted by Courtney Morris & Breiah Adams

Picture this: hundreds of Native Americans, our ancestors, walking to what they think of as their death. Some know this walk as The Trail of Tears. They have been beaten, hungry, thirsty, and forced to move from their homeland. They come to a riverside in a place called Tuscumbia. They find food, water, and a place to lay their heads. This is the first act of kindness they have experienced since the beginning of their journey.

For the past nine years Robert Thrower has been a part of the Walk of Life in Tuscumbia, AL that is done each year in remembrance of our native brothers and sisters that had to walk this dreadful path. walk to remember for these two young women. The big difference today is that it is not a

to be Creek Indian. It is not a name or title; it is blood, it is history, knowing you are part of something bigger than vourself.

We would love to see more of our Poarch Creek Family experience all the feelings we felt that day. To know where you are going, you need to know where you have been. Everyone needs to know the struggle and heartache that has gotten you to where you are today to truly appreciate it. We are thankful for the ones before us. We will always remember that day and we will always remember Tuscumbia.

Courtney Morris and Breiah Adams 2009-2010 Senior and Junior Princesses

sign of death, but a sign of life. This is why it is called the Walk of Life. When Mr. Thrower came to us about participating in this walk, we were not sure what to expect or feel.

Everyone knows what The Trail of Tears means to Native Americans. Being Poarch Creek, we are some of the fortunate few that did not have to endure that heartbreaking journey, but many of our relatives did. We cannot imagine being separated from our family and having to leave the place we call home.

Standing on the trail before starting the walk, everyone gathers in a circle to hear a little history about The Trail of Tears. They explain to us that we will be walking in reverse, which symbolizes coming home. Mr. Jay McGirt, who is from the Creek Nation in Oklahoma, sings a Creek hymn "Cesvs Pvrke Likan." You can sense all kinds of emotions. It brings tears to our eyes.

One mile into the walk it is hot, we are sweating, thirsty and boy do we smile when we can see a short stretch with shade. At the end of the walk everyone meets in the park. As Robert introduces us, we are honored to be the first Poarch Creek Indian princesses to participate in the walk. We and Mr. McGirt sang "Heleluyvn" in the Creek language. It is very special to us. In a way it is like our ancestor's families that were separated years ago are being brought together again in song. Mr. McGirt tells us that he is happy to see we are learning some of the songs of our ancestors and to keep learning. He also encourages us to learn the Creek language. Mr. McGirt explains when you have it in you, it is in your heart and you can truly know what it feels

by James Treat, Muscogee Nation News

The third month of the Mvskoke year is commonly translated as "Little Chestnut," but there's more to it than that. In linguistic terms, this month's name was formed by combining the noun oto, "chestnut," with an inflection of the verb wvsketv, "to thrash," producing the phrase otvwoskv, "chestnut-thrashing," then adding the diminutive suffix -uce, "little." So a literal translation of Otvwoskuce is "Little Chestnut-Thrashing." Like other months in cokv-walv Mvskoke, it has a counterpart in the annual cycle-in this case, the month that follows: Otvwoskv-Rakko, "Big Chestnut-Thrashing."

Space limits the continued publication of the monthly articles by James Treat of the Muscogee Nation News. You can receive the full text of each month's column in your inbox by subscribing to Mvskoke Country. In the right column on the website, enter your email address and click the "Subscribe" button. Calvin McGhee Memorial

"You guys have done a great job!" "Wow! Everything looks great!" "The food is great! I loved the shaved ice!" "The artwork is amazing!" "We have had a great time, we can't wait until next year." "I am glad to see that you have lots of things for the kids to do." These are just a few of the comments people had to say about the Calvin McGhee Memorial held at the Pow Wow Grounds September 18, 2010. I agree with the comments, the event was well planned, well organized, and well received.

The event had a little something for everyone. The submissions for the Art Expo were set up in the Pickrell House; there were native craft vendors for those who might want to purchase native crafts and art; there was a cake and pie contest; there was an exhibition by the Pow Wow Club; there were games and activities for children that included pony rides and a rock climbing wall; there was great gospel singing; and there was food with a menu ranging from Indian Taco, fry bread & lima beans, to rice & tomato gravy with biscuits (which is always a crowd favorite). They even had the Alabama game on big screen TV!! Tables and chairs were set up under large tents so that there was plenty of shade and a comfortable place to set while enjoying the festivities.

We extend our congratulations to the Calvin McGhee Cultural Authority for hosting such a great event. We can't wait to see what you do next year!

Gayle Johnson, Media Specialist

The submissions for the Art Expo were outstanding. Clarence Rolin's handmade drum placed first in Traditional Utilities. Stella Rutherford placed first in patchwork.

Cake contest winners- l-r Robert Selzer, 1st with German Chocolate Cake; Lois Amos, 2nd with Italian Cream Cake; and Jean Ardis, 3rd with Coconut Cake

Dance Can Change Your Life

By Venus McGhee Prince

I vas an 8th grader at Escambia County Middle School. Although I was involved in many extracurricular activities, dance was my passion. I took classes from not one, but both, dance teachers in Atmore. Little did I know that one of them—Mrs. Judith Adams—would change the course of my life.

My family has always been rich in the things that count in life, but when I was a kid we lived paycheck-to-paycheck. Still, my parents always found a way for my sister and me to participate in any activities that we wanted. When I was 8 years old in Gretna, Louisiana, I begged to take classes at a local dance studio. Although we didn't have much extra cash, I remember my mom talking to the teacher about a payment plan to cover my classes and to pay for any costumes for performances.

For the next three years, I had the time of my life putting on fancy costumes and performing at our spring dance recitals. Then in the summer of 1984 we moved to Atmore. I immediately searched for any local dance studios and found Mrs. Judith Adams who taught several dance forms. Mrs. Adams quickly became my mentor and my friend. Over the next three years, I took every class from her that I could and started traveling to Brewton and Bay Minette to assist with her classes.

For the first time, I also experienced Native dance—both Pow-Wow and Creek traditional stomp dancing. Our local dance group traveled to Pow-Wows throughout the Southeast and participated in the Green Corn Ceremony at the Tallahassee stomp grounds in Oklahoma. What a wonderful feeling to know that something I loved so dearly was such a fundamental part of my Native identity!

My biggest challenge was figuring out how to fit it all into my schedule as I prepared to go to Escambia County High School. Then, one day, Mrs. Adams asked, "Have you ever heard of the Alabama School of Fine Arts?" Seeing the blank look on my face, she explained that it was a public school in Birmingham that specialized in fine arts and that it had a superb dance program.

After much soul-searching and long talks with my family and Mrs. Adams, I decided to pursue my passion for dance. I knew that if I didn't, I would always regret it. At the time, I had no idea that this one decision would be the key to opening many unexpected doors over the course of my life.

ASFA led to college. College led to law school. Law school led to a clerkship with the Alaska Supreme Court and to a job at an Indian law firm in Washington, DC. The doors just kept opening. I would never have had these opportunities but for one inspiring dance teacher's suggestion that I pursue my dream.

It's now been 24 years since I took my first dance class from Mrs. Adams, and I am back in Atmore. I'm not dancing anymore, but Mrs. Adams and her daughter Reed are still inspiring young students to dance—in a new dance program started this fall at the Tribe's own gym.

Who would've thought that one dance teacher could change the course of my life? Not only did dance put me on the path to my career, but it strengthened my ties to our Tribe and its rich tradition of dance.

I hope that you encourage your kids to dance with Mrs. Adams and Reed. Who knows where it might lead?

Environmental Department Covers A Lot Of Territory

Submitted by Laura Lee Cook, Director

I know everyone wonders what the Environmental Department does. Well, we cover a lot of territory. We routinely water test all the streams that run through Tribal lands once each month for bacterial infractions and once per quarter for chemical infractions. The bacterial samples are tested in-house.

After they are retrieved from the streams the chemical samples are taken to the Test America Laboratory in Mobile, AL. Once each quarter the bacterial samples are carried to Test America to verify our laboratory results. If the test results are not good, then we re-test and if necessary post signs for "no swimming" or "no fishing". We recently received a call that we had a "fish kill" in one of the streams so we had to go down, pull some samples from several sites, pick some "dead' fish out of water, wrap in aluminum foil, freeze them. The samples were taken to Test America Lab and depending on the results, we may have to have the fish dissected to see what happened.

We also work with Magnolia Branch Reserve in clearing, burning and planting long leaf pines in designated areas. We have set up a gopher-tortoise habitat at Magnolia; we relocate gophers and tortoises found by roadsides and at construction sites to a safe place to call home.

Our work encompasses help at the schools for different environmental projects. We assisted in establishing a wetland area near a butterfly garden at one of the schools and assisted students at Huxford Elementary prepare a small garden; this showed the students what has to be done to prevent insects from "taking over" and how to nurture a garden by watering it and removing all the debris.

Another on-going project we have is recycling and teaching the children from local schools how to separate paper, cans, etc. This project is going to be expounded upon within the next two months.

The Department has one pitcher plant bog near the new Water/Sewage treatment plant that has beautiful picture plants growing and another has been established at Magnolia Branch Reserve. These have to be burned each year. In the next few months, we will be planting some different varieties of the picture-plants, as well as posting a sign so everyone can find them. They are beautiful plants.

Our paper recycling is really helping alleviate all the excess paper from the offices and that is picked up once each week; cardboard is picked up from Tribal businesses, baled and then sent to the company that takes it and makes it into other usable products.

Each year we try to have one day for taking in electronic recycling items, i.e., computers, monitors, printers, TVs, etc.. This year the event was held on August 7, 2010 and we received: 93 computers, 3 laptops, 97 computer monitors, 85 TVs, 5 LCD computer monitors, 106 computer peripherals (speakers, web cams, etc.), 3 copy machines, and a lot more miscellaneous electronics that were not categorized. In total 17,652 pounds of electronic equipment was collected to be recycled. I will say the next electronic recycling event will not be held in August! This must have been the "hottest" day of the year and our department personnel were extremely busy unloading trucks, trailers, cars, then wrapping items, transferring from one trailer to a larger one all day. The clients bringing the material were most sympathetic and tried to help as much as possible.

We will be having a Neutering event for cats and dogs in the near future. Notices will be put out for this project. We will be giving vouchers out for the owners to take their pets to a local Vet but please do not call until we get the details in place.

We also issue car seats, do septic tank assessments, food establishment inspections and numerous other duties to lengthy to mention. When you see the Environmental truck around you know we are busy on a project.

I wanted to take this opportunity to update you on several legal matters affecting your interests as tribal members. If you have any questions regarding any of these matters, please feel free to contact any of your Tribal Council members at (251) 446-1140 or me at (251) 368-9136 Ext. 2525.

Tribal Legislation

The Tribal Council recently passed revisions to the Legislative Code in an effort to allow tribal members more opportunity to provide input on (1) proposed Resolutions for Constitutional Amendments and (2) Ordinances.

As you know, a Constitutional Amendment passed in June that requires that the Tribal Council provide notice of any proposed amendment and the purpose and draft language of the amendment at least thirty (30) days prior to the Tribal Council's vote on the authorizing Resolution. The new revisions to the Legislative Code clarify and expand this opportunity for input by (1) providing details regarding where and how tribal members can submit comments on the proposed amendment and (2) requiring that the Tribal Council hold at least one public hearing before the Council votes.

Before now, there was no requirement that any notice or opportunity to be heard be provided to tribal members regarding proposed or amended Ordinances. The new revisions to the Legislative Code now require that the Tribal Council provide notice and make available copies of a proposed or amended Ordinance at a prior regularly scheduled official meeting and wait to vote on that Ordinance until at least one official meeting later.

Legal Services Program

As mentioned in past newsletters, the Tribal Council is currently considering a new tribal member benefit—the establishment of a Legal Services Program that would provide certain types of legal services to individual tribal members regardless of his or her location or income. THANK YOU to all tribal members who responded to our survey regarding legal services needed by tribal members and to everyone who attended our Talk Time with Legal. Your insight and input are invaluable and will help us in preparing our recommendations to the Tribal Council. We will certainly keep you posted as to developments.

Significant Court Cases

Community Recovery Services, Inc. v. PCI Gaming v. Eddie L. Tullis

As you know, in March 2006 Community Recovery Services, Inc. ("CRS") sued PCI Gaming in Tribal Court for over $2.1 million claiming unpaid invoices for the performance of work on the Riverside project. For the past four years, PCI Gaming has defended itself against CRS' claims and maintained its counterclaim against CRS for over $2.5 million in excessive overcharges in the performance of the same work. As part of its defense, PCI Gaming filed a third party complaint against Eddie L. Tullis, so that PCI Gaming's assets would be fully protected if it were ordered to pay monies to CRS.

The trial was held the week of June 22, 2009. PCI Gaming filed a post-trial evidentiary motion on October 1, 2009, and the parties completed post-trial briefing on November 3, 2009. Per a request from the Tribal Judge on July 26, 2010, the attorneys for the parties participated in a conference to respond to questions from the Court on September 13, 2010. The Tribal Judge invited, but did not require, the parties to respond in writing to any of the questions raised during the conference. The Court did not indicate when it planned to rule on the evidence in the case.

WHO WOULD HAVE THOUGHT

Submitted by Rose McGhee Conlon

You ever find yourself at a restaurant and your child is texting away vigorously? Are you forced to communicate with your children via text? And.... your phone bill is racked up from all the messages your child sends? Seems like no good could come from this new wave of technology. But one tribal member, Rose McGhee Conlon, has found glory in the sometimes annoying habit of her 15- year-old daughter, Angel, who is the greatgranddaughter of the late Chief Calvin McGhee.

Texting is the new way of communicating these days, especially for teens and young adults. On any given day if you walk down the street or go to the mall, you're bound to see someone typing away on their cell phone. It's become much of a mundane activity now. Besides the occasional argument about how rude it is to text at your family's Christmas party, or the dangers of texting and driving, texting is usually an uneventful pastime. That's exactly what Angel Conlon thought. She would text her friends about all of the latest news, but she never dreamed that texting could win her a trip to New York City. Let alone with a chance to compete for ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS!!! While watching one of her favorite television shows, Angel saw an advertisement by one of the major electronics corporations, LG, who just happens to be one of the lead producers of cellular phones. In the ad viewers were asked to text a phrase that appeared on the screen. The fastest contestant to complete the phrase, with no errors, would receive a trip to New York City to compete in the LG 2010 National Texting Competition with the chance of winning $100,000, with an opportunity to win an additional $50,000 to be given to the charity of the winner's choice. Angel thought that it could be fun so she sent a text message. A few minutes later, she received a message confirming that LG had received her message and that she had not won and to try again at a later day and time. Angel did just that, the following week. This time after sending in her message she did not receive a confirming message. She assumed she had not won and went about her daily routine. A few days later, Angel received a call from Moya Walsh, one of the people with Fathom Communications, working with other companies which were also responsible for the LG texting competition. She surprised Angel by telling her that she had been the fastest person to accurately send in her text message, beating out over 500,000 other people across the nation. Angel was excited and immediately told her mother, Rose Conlon, about her exciting news. Seeming too good to be true, Rose checked out the competition online, and found that it was in fact a legitimate tournament.

The 2010 LG National Texting Competition took place on September 20th and 21st, in downtown Manhatten, in New York City. There Angel and 31 other contestants from around the country, competed in a two day texting challenge... texting blindfolded, through obstacles, and other assortments of challenging ways.

Thirty-two people from across the nation were all brought together (compliments of LG Corporation) in an attempt to win $100,000 with an additional chance of winning $50,000 being donated to the charity of his or her choice.

On the first day Angel won the competition to qualify for the LG Mobile World Cup in New York City in January of 2011, where the fastest texters from around the world will compete in the ultimate international texting showdown. In addition to winning that place, she immediately won a $500 cash prize.

Also on the first day, 24 of the 32 finalists were eliminated! The second day consisted of "The Elite 8 + Kate" (Kate being the 2009 LG Texting Champion). Angel was down to 5th place and had a good shot at winning when her finger accidentally hit the "send" button during the blindfolded competition. So, she ended her part of that competition in 5th place and now awaits the World Cup Championship where she and the 2010 Texting Champion will represent the United States of America.

In addition to all of this, an Academy Award winning director from Hollywood, Bill Coutourie, is making a documentary on this competition and will be including Angel. You can check all of this out on the LG TEXTER Facebook page and start preparing for the 2011 LG National Texting Championship.

The next time you get an insane phone bill because your child texts too much, just think of the possibilities!

Congratulations Angel!!

Four Attend Be Ready Camp

Submitted by Christyn Sells

On September 14th-18th, 2010, four 6th grade PCI students participated in "Be Ready" Camp. This is a disaster preparedness and 1st response camp for Alabama 6th graders and was created by the Governor's office of Faith based and Community Initiatives and the Alabama Department of Homeland Security. Camp is held at the U.S. Space and Rocket Center in Huntsville, AL. During the week of September 14-18, Melea McGhee, Alia Snow, Shawnee McGee and Hunter Nobles, learned about topics that ranged from fire safety to light search and rescue and culminated at the end of the week with a mock disaster. The campers worked side by side with 1st responders to respond to a simulated plane crash. Also, while there, the campers learned about medical triage, and prioritizing disaster victims. At the end of the week the campers graduated on "Be Ready" Day.

Ethics Corner

By: Carrie Martin, Ethics Chair

The following is a continuation of an advisory opinion which the Ethics Board has addressed. The first part was published in last month's issue; the completion of the advisory opinion will be published in next month's issue of the newsletter.

2. Is it an ethics violation for Tribal officials or key employees to use their positions to intimidate staff members?

To intimidate is "to make afraid;" "force or stop with threats or violence." Whether an act of intimidation has, in fact, occurred depends on the specific conduct, words and circumstances of the case. If any Tribal Member is permitted to call staff members request public information, inquire as to scheduling or matters unrelated to merits of the case, similar contacts by Tribal Officials or key employees would not be objectionable.

Assuming conduct by a Tribal Official or key employee constitutes intimidation of staff, such intimidation would violate Ethics Code 28-1-5(h)(2) if the Tribal Official or key employee intended to cause the staff member to violate a tribal law or policy. If the intimidation were motivated by a desire to favor the Tribal Official or key employee's family, friends, or business associates, Ethics Code 28-1-5(i) would also be violated.

3. Is it an ethics violation for Tribal Officials or key employees to attempt to obtain confidential information regarding court cases?

We assume that by "confidential" the requester means information not available to the general public. Again, specific circumstances are important. A Tribal Official or key employee who seeks information that he or she believes to be public and who stops immediately upon learning that the information is confidential has likely committed no ethical violation. If, however, the Tribal Official or key employee seeks information he or she knows that the staff is required to keep confidential and if the Tribal Official or key employee relies on his or her position to pressure the staff to disclose the information, Ethics Code 28-1-5(h)(2) would likely be violated.

You can obtain a copy of the Ethics Code, forms for advisory opinions, or ethics complaints from the Tribal Chairman's Office, Legal Department, or Tribal Court.

Lighting of Christmas Tree Will Follow Christmas Parade

It has long been the custom for the holiday season to put up a large, beautifully decorated Christmas tree in the Tribal Council Chambers. This year one of the live evergreens outside the Tribal Council Chambers will be decorated for this year's holiday season and will be lit following the Christmas parade. You are invited to join us outside the Tribal Council Chambers for the lighting of the Christmas tree immediately following the Christmas Parade; the winning floats will also be announced at this time. Refreshments will be served in the Tribal Council Chambers after the tree lighting.

The Christmas Parade is scheduled for Friday, December 3, 2010. Line up will be at 4:00 p.m. with the parade beginning at 5:00 p.m. Prizes will be awarded for first, second, and third place; these floats will also participate in Atmore Christmas Parade scheduled for the next day. The parade will follow the same route as last year except that it will end in the parking lot of Building 100 (behind the Health Clinic). We are asking that no one park in this area.

Parades can be fun for the whole family. Taking a few precautions can make the parade a safe and enjoyable event for the whole family to enjoy. Using these simple tips can curb many of the problems and worries that arise.

The road and candy: One of the biggest attractions of a parade for children is the candy tossed from the floats. Some of the candy usually ends up within the middle of the road and children tend to disregard the oncoming parade to get the candy. Make sure your children do not go into the road after candy.

Dress to impress: Anywhere there is a large crowd of people it is easy to get separated from your children. Dress your children so they are easier to spot in a crowd.

Ear Plugs: If you have children that are sensitive to sound or are really young, you should consider buying earplugs for them. Most parades have sirens that can be scary and harmful children.

The Hard Road to Federal Recognition

Over the past few years we have had inquires from Tribal Members wanting to learn more about the Tribe's Federal Recognition process and the historical information that was provided to the Federal Government for Federal Recognition. The Tribal Council would like to share this information with you. It will outline the struggles and hardships that as a community we have experienced. However, as you will see in future articles, it was these struggles and hardships that kept our community together which was essential in our Federal Recognition.

Tecumseh's visit to the Creek Nation established links between the Shawnee and the hostile Creeks. Inspired by teachings of Tecumseh and his prophet brother a party of Creeks under the leadership of Little Warrior accompanied the Shawnee to their homeland and killed several families of white settlers near the mouth of the Duck River. Upon their return, word of the killing spread among both the Indian and white communities; adding to the problems were the murders of two white settlers in the Nation which were also attributed to Little Warrior and his party.

The Creek National Council convened to address the issue. The Council sent William McIntosh - a Lower Creek - and a force of Creeks to kill Little Warrior and his party. The Council's orders were carried out and the execution took place shortly thereafter. This infuriated the hostile Upper Creeks; they fell upon the twenty-three older chiefs who were opposed to war, killing them all and destroying their property. The Creek National Council, who had tried to preserve peace and accommodate both sides, fortified at Tuckaubatchee and were attached by the hostiles or Red Sticks. After an eight day siege the Council and some of the inhabitants of Tuckaubatchee were rescued by a party of Lower Creek warriors and were taken to Coweta. After the rescue, Tuckaubatchee was destroyed by the hostiles. Coweta, center for the Lower Creeks and Indians friendly to the United States, became the center for the Creek Nation's activity from that point on.

July and August of 1813 was a time of crisis for everyone in the territory. The lines had been clearly drawn, the white settlers and friendly half-blood Upper Creeks especially, were expecting the worst. According to Sam Moniac, "They [the Red Sticks] have destroyed a large quality of my cattle, and burnt my houses on my river plantation, as well as those of James Cornells and Leonard McGhee." This destruction continued as Peter McQueen, a hostile half-blood, High Head Jim, and Josiah Francis, the local Creek prophet and half-blood, most of whom were from outside the Tensaw area, began an expedition with several hundred warriors to Pensacola from the Upper Creek country to purchase arms and munitions for the war. Along the way they terrorized friendly half bloods and destroyed crops and dwellings. At Burnt Corn Springs they attacked the home of James Cornells. They burned his house, ran off his slaves and carried off his wife, Betsy Coulter, and James Marlow as prisoners. This action stuck panic in the hearts of both whites and half-bloods alike in the Tensaw settlement.

Having procured arms and ammunition in Pensacola, the hostiles started back to the Nation and were met by a 180 man force of whites under Colonel James Caller and halfbloods under Captain Dixon Bailey, David Tate, and James Cornells at Burnt Corn. Initially, the force surprised the hostiles and ran them off. While Caller's and Bailey's men were rummaging through the booty left by the hostile Creeks, the hostiles regrouped and attacked, thoroughly surprising the expedition and scattering them in all directions. It is significant that both a white force and a half-blood force set out the oppose the hostiles. This indicates no only a distinction between the residents of the Tensaw/Tombigbee area in terms of ethnicity, but it shows a clear leadership role, e.g, that David Tate and "Captain" Dixon Bailey, a half-blood who later died in the fighting at Ft. Mims, had mustered and led men to this skirmish.

The white and half-blood settlements in and around the nation began bracing themselves for an all-out attack by the hostiles who had worked themselves into a fervor under the promise of expelling the whites and redeeming their pristine aboriginal state. The Creek chiefs - Big Warrior and Alexander Cornells- warned the military that the hostiles intended to attack Tensaw; they fortified various homesteads along the banks of the Alabama and placed garrisons there. The home of Samuel Mims, once barricaded, became Fort Mims, and Major Daniel Beasley was placed in charge of defending it. On the afternoon of August 30th approximately 800 hostile Creeks from 13 Upper towns quickly overran the outer fortifications and cornered the whites and half-bloods in one of the houses. At the end of the day, Ft. Mims lay in a pile of aches and rubble and of the 553 who took refuge only 40 escaped with their lives.

The destruction of Ft. Mims mobilized American forces against the hostile Creeks. Generals Claiborne, Floyd, and Andrew Jackson attacked the hostile forces on different fronts. Many Lower Creek and friendly Upper Creeks and half-bloods fought alongside Jackson. After a number of battles between the hostile Creeks and those three field commanders throughout the fall and winter of 1813-1814, the decisive day came on March 27, 1814. On that day at a place called Tohopeka, or Horseshoe Bend, Jackson's army faced 1,000 Creek warriors. After a bloody battle and hundreds of casualties, the hostile Creeks were thoroughly defeated, and the Red Stick rebellion was smashed.

The Treaty of Ft. Jackson marks a pivotal point in the history of the Poarch Band of Creeks, for it was under the provisions of this treaty that many of the present group's ancestors, including Lynn McGhee, received grants for their land in the Tensaw area from the Untied States for their support in the Creek War. The treaty itself was arranged by Andrew Jackson and its content was consistent with the acquisitive, expansionist environment of the time and the anti-Creek sentiments. Signed by representatives of both sides on August 9, 1814 the treaty ceded immense portions of both Upper and Lower Creek lands to the United States, running east from Georgia to the Tombigbee

River and north almost to the Tennessee border. The Creek signatories to the treaty signed under protest, but to not avail. The crucial provision in the treaty relative to the history of the Poarch Band of Creeks is found in Article 1:
